

FACULTY SEARCH

Two Tenure-track Positions

The Edward J. Bloustein School of Planning and Public Policy seeks applicants for two faculty positions to begin July 2007. Appointment at the assistant professor level is anticipated; appointment at the associate professor level is possible.

Candidates should have research and teaching interests in one or more of the following areas: community development; education policy; environment; housing; international development; land-use planning; nonprofit management; planning and urban theory; qualitative and quantitative methods; race, ethnicity, and gender; social and health policy; and/or urban design. Appointed faculty members will teach two undergraduate and two graduate courses per year.

The Bloustein School offers a multidisciplinary Ph.D. program in planning and public policy; master's programs in urban planning and policy development and in public policy; and undergraduate programs in planning and policy and in public health. The school's research centers conduct more than $23 million in externally funded research annually. For further information, visit the Edward J. Bloustein School Web site at <http://www.policy.rutgers.edu>.

All applicants must apply via email to the search committee at facultysearch@policy.rutgers.edu. Attach a letter of interest, a curriculum vitae, no more than two published or other writing samples, and names of three references. Review of applications will begin on January 15, 2007, and will continue until the positions are filled.

Rutgers University is an Affirmative Action, Equal Opportunity employer committed to expanding the educational diversity of its faculty and students and encourages applications from a broad variety of candidates.